PostCalls™ Voice Broadcasting Services Welcome Alaska with Open Arms

America's One-to-Many Messenger™ extends its messaging reach to Alaska, furthering its North American coverage, which includes all of Canada and Puerto Rico.

AUGUSTA, GA (PR WEB) March 29, 2010 – PostCalls™, a CallingPost company, is pleased to announce the expansion of its voice broadcasting services to Alaska, welcoming the new state to their voice messaging reach. PostCalls™ is experiencing consistent expansion momentum, keeping true to its exponential growth since May of last year when the borders were broken from the lower 48 states with the addition of Canada and Puerto Rico.

"Our clients will no longer need to send separate messages to Alaska," says Phil Alexander, CEO and Founder of CallingPost Communications. "This growth enables us to continue to make our clients' messaging experience much easier, plus it helps them grow and expand, sending their messages even further than before," he continues. PostCalls™, the commercial division of CallingPost Communications, is continuing to see record growth since their inception. Because of this, they are able to maintain their offer to businesses of premium voice broadcasting services, specializing in providing effective communication solutions through a simple, easy-to-use interface and a results-driven system.

"Our mission is to help our users communicate more efficiently, and our goal is to make it possible for them to broadcast their message to all parts of the world, in addition to North America," affirms Alexander. "We intend to keep expanding, and someday soon maybe we'll become the global one-to-many messenger," he adds with a smile. "Along with the recent addition of the new PostCalls features, this service expansion is something we are very excited about; we're thrilled to be able to provide this for our clients and plan to keep full steam ahead," Alexander encourages.

"Adding Alaska to our messaging reach has been something many of our loyal clients have been waiting on, faithfully. Everything we do is for our clients, from the features we create and the quality of our service to working diligently with federal, state and local agencies like the FCC and FBI to prevent fraud and misuse of this very powerful tool. It's why we have been able to grow so fast; we're committed to our clients' success, and that's why they stay," Alexander continues.

Since 1995 when they invented hosted automated message delivery, CallingPost Communications has sent over one hundred million messages for well over 65 thousand clients. CallingPost™ attributes their success to proven reliability, verifiable results and personal Customer Care, which they believe make their service an indispensable tool for those who want to save valuable time and resources. The inspiration behind their products and tools is to help the user work smarter, not harder, effectively multiplying the efforts of their clients.

CallingPost Communications, Inc. was founded in 1995 by Phil Alexander, a soccer coach and nuclear engineer, after recognizing the need for an easy-to-use automated calling system for volunteer organizations. Services are now available in all areas of the continental United States, including Alaska, as well Canada and Puerto Rico.
